Being and Becoming an English Teacher

Tutor: Thaïs Werstein
Anchor point: TEFL
Wednesday 14-18, weekly (Rote Kaserne 101, Sozialraum)
First session: 15 May
Max. 12 participants

Studying English to become a teacher?
Lesson planning? Not a problem!
This tutorial is designed to help you gain the necessary knowledge and language level for lesson planning.

Being an English teacher? No worries!
We will explore a wide range of opportunities to develop your individual teaching and discuss the broader context of a teacher’s profession.

Interested in teaching English globally? Great!
We will have a look at all the possibilities and the global perspective of teaching English and how we can benefit from international interaction.

Studying can often be quite theoretical, not this tutorial. It is supposed to build on a more practical platform, discussing relevant content about the broader context of a teacher’s profession and providing the necessary opportunities for self-reflection and peer-to-peer knowledge transfer to help you become a teacher of the highest calibre. We will have a look at lesson planning and useful material. We will develop language skills for lesson planning and the discourse among English teachers, as well as topics such as technology and media regarding teaching, teaching a global language and being a representative of the English language. Language pedagogy is constantly updating and developing, so everyone should keep interested and informed.
